Goddard seminary suffered the worst defeat it has experienced in basketball this winter Saturday night when Stowe high school walloped the team 64 to 7 at Stowe. The trip to Stowe was made, minus the services of several stars, including Witt, Peterson and Fealey. LeBaron and Farrell were substituted in the backfield and were unable to hinder the Stowe forwards from scoring. The best work accomplished by the seminary was by Aldrich and Bishop. The Stowe players smothered the diminutive forwards of Goddard and kept them well covered all through the game. Bishop was a power of strength for Goddard on the offense. He found little difficulty in dribbling through the Stowe team, but was unable to shoot with accuracy. The lineup of the team was as follows: Goddard—Aldrich, Tierney, forwards; Bishop, Merrill center; LeBaron and Farrell, guards; Stowe—Shaw and Plouf, forwards; McQueen, center; Smalley and McMahon, guards. Referee—Kurtz.

TALK OF THE TOWN

E. J. Dion of Second street returned to the city to-day from Essex Junction, where he has been visiting.

John Parks of Central street returned this morning from Waterbury, where he has been visiting with relatives for a few days.

A masquerade ball will be held Saturday evening at the Socialist hall on Granite street under the auspices of the I. A. C. This is an annual ball.

At the regular meeting of the Royal Arcanum held last Friday night in the Blanchard building, J. A. Gauthier was elected to act as regent of the lodge for the coming year, filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of Richard Veale, who was unable to devote the required time to the office owing to business reasons. D. S. Corlies was selected as vice regent. The annual reports of the officers of the lodge were submitted at the meeting. The reports were satisfactory and indicate that another prosperous year is in store for the Arcanum.

That was the trade of camera-making. He followed it precariously in New York for a year, had his shop swept by flames, and found himself at forty-one well-nigh penniless. Then it was that he began to supply photographs of news events to the old Illustrated American at a time when there were not a half-dozen others employed in this profession. When the Maine was blown up the unknown little Englishman hurried to the office of the late P. E. Collier and volunteered to go down to Havana and get some pictures at the scene of the tragedy. The publisher commissioned Hare to make the trip. He was to be gone two or three weeks; he was in Cuba seven months, and when he returned he was Hare, the war photographer. The work he had done in the trenches before Santiago and along the road from Siboney had helped to establish a reputation.

"It is the ability to catch the dramatic elements in the event he is picturing that sets Jimmy Hare apart from what he himself terms the 'button-pushers.' Add to that his infinite resource and the sublime impudence he uses to push himself through all barriers to the seat of action, and you have the receipt of his professional success. As to the latter quality, no man can excel him in the fine art of 'jolly'ing.' He was the only correspondent with the Japanese army in Manchuria for whom Field-Marshal Oyama would pose; Hare made the great fighter believe that to pose for him was as great an honor to the subject as to sit for a portrait by a master, and he often snapped his shutter at the big man when he had no plates in his camera, just to demonstrate to the evasive correspondent that he had the old boy well trained."

"A year ago, during a football game on the Princeton field, an aeroplane sailed lazily back and forth over the gridiron and the great oval, lunked with spectators, five hundred feet up, and then disappeared. A few minutes later Jimmy Hare walked down to the side lines with his black box and began to squint through it at the players. A beribboned official came hurrying up to order Hare off the field. 'What's the matter with you?' Jimmy demanded angrily. 'Wasn't I just now taking snaps all over your bally field from the aeroplane, when I could just as well as not have dropped into the middle of a 'serim'?' Well, I didn't, did I? So what are you kicking about?"

EXPECT 12,000 MORE TO JOIN STRIKE

Second Week of Boston Garment Workers' Trouble Began To-day With That Prospect in View, Said Labor Leaders.

Boston, Feb. 10.—The second week of the strike of 5,000 garment workers opened to-day with a prospect that 12,000 others will join before the end of the week. The strike has thus far been confined to the workers on men's garments and raincoats, but the leaders predict all operatives employed by manufacturers of ladies' garments will leave work shortly to enforce their demands for a wage advance and other concessions. Thirty shops have granted their demands and 1,200 have returned to work.
